

FAIRBANK CENTER for Chinese Studies
WORKSHOP

Fuguo Qiangbing
(富国强兵) Revisited:
An Interdisciplinary Analysis of Economic and Fiscal Factors in the Making of China's Foreign and
Security Policy since the Late Qing

Felix Boecking & Andrew Erickson

Friday, May 13, 2011 1:30-7:00 pm
S050, CGIS South, 1730 Cambridge St., Harvard University

This workshop engages with the balance between economic and political/military strength in Chinese foreign policy-making. Historical papers on the late Qing, Republican, early Chinese Communist, and contemporary PRC foreign policy demonstrate how the strength of fiscal and economic policy influenced the ability of successive governments to achieve their foreign and security policy objectives.

Participants: Robert Ross (Boston College), M. Taylor Fravel (MIT), Andrew Erickson, (US Naval War College, PHCW postdoctoral fellow), William Norris (Princeton-Harvard China and the World Program), Elisabeth Köll (Harvard Business School), Stephen Halsey (UMiami), Felix Boecking (University of Edinburgh/An Wang postdoctoral fellow), Monika Kauer (research scholar, Harvard), Christopher Leighton (MIT).

For more information, go to: <http://fairbank.fas.harvard.edu/event/felix-boecking-workshop>

